It's That Special Mercy Touch!

James McDuffie of EVS is one of many associates referenced in Amy Dickinson's Tweets.

Our Mercy Family was paid quite a compliment this year from the famous columnist Amy Dickinson, "Ask Amy", when she expressed gratitude about her experience during her father's hospital stay. Though her father sadly passed away, she was impressed with the care she witnessed.

She wrote, "During the week I spent with him there, I was overcome—and overwhelmed—by the gentle and compassionate care he received at every turn. I truly have no words, except to say thank you all, sincerely, for your professionalism and loving-kindness...Every single one of you applied the concept of 'mercy' to your well-named hospital."

Dickinson also shared the series of Tweets from @askingamy that she wrote and posted:

"God bless the orderlies and the nurses and the army of people who provide care in our hospitals. (I'm with my dad in the ICU).

Because there are at least 30 people providing various levels of care to my old man. Including Martin, a 6'5" orderly.

God bless the night shift of hospital workers who administer the meds and change the beds and attend to the beeping machines.

God bless the early morning orderlies and the PT lovelies and the social worker half my age who wants to bring me coffee.

Philanthropic Priority Projects Operating Room Modernization

Founded over 100 years ago by the Sister of Mercy, Mercy Hospital of Buffalo continues to be recognized as one of the nation's top-performing hospitals for quality and value. Mercy is committed to implementing leading edge diagnostic and surgical treatment and to providing the best possible care for the over 322,000 patients we proudly care for at our hospital and relating care ministries.

It is expected that the delivery of surgical care will be safe, patient-centered, efficient, and effective. To this end, modern Operating Rooms are critical to meeting our patients' quality and safety goals. Capital investment in Operating Room (OR) modernization will greatly benefit thousands of patients at Mercy, a tertiary care facility and home of Catholic Health's Head and Heart Centers.

In 2017, with strong leadership from Drs. Kenneth Eckhert, III, Medical Director of OR Efficiency, and Timothy Gabryel, VP of Medical Affairs, the Mercy Hospital Foundation secured a $100,000 grant from the James H. Cummings Foundation to support OR Modernization. Additionally, several other gifts received by the Mercy Hospital Foundation for this project have enabled the Foundation to support renovations and to date 3 of the hospital's 14 Operating Rooms have been upgraded.

How can you help?

The OR Modernization efforts will continue into 2018. Please join us by giving a gift to support the Operating Room Modernization Campaign. It takes strong financial support to ensure that the outstanding care provided at Mercy is reinforced by state-of-the-art facilities, advanced clinical education, and technology. That is where you and the Mercy Hospital Foundation serve as partners in care.

To learn more or make a gift to this important patient-centered project, please contact Kathy Swenson, Mercy Hospital Foundation Executive Director, by calling 716-828-2120, emailing kswenson@chsbuffalo.org, or visiting www.chsbuffalo.org/FCH/Mercy/Gift. Thank you for your support.

Sweet Mercy!

Family BirthPlace Offers Milk Bank Depot

Earlier this year, Catholic Health began participating in the New York Milk Bank Program that offers safe, pasteurized donor breast milk to infants in need when their mothers' own milk is unavailable or insufficient.

"Milk Bank Depots" established at Mercy, Sisters of Charity and Mount St. Mary's Hospitals give mothers an opportunity to donate breast milk to help improve the health of premature babies.

"When I heard I could donate excess breast milk to help preemies, I wanted to assist," said

Liza Gutierrez donates breast milk to Tammy Kowalik, RN, as part of the milk bank program.

Here's to the floor sweeper and the sleepy security guard and the hospice volunteer who will all shepherd you into the good night.

Here's to the hospital weekend staff. They took the tough shifts, missing ball games, picnics, and prom pics — just like their patients.

Here's to the nurse Christine, at the end of her shift, who talks to my dad as she treats him, and then asks what she can do for me.

God bless John, who cleans the room, and Jake, overnight orderly, who says, "Tonight, I'm your guy. Anything you need, you find me."

Here's to the hospitalist, who prescribed a Tim Horton Boston Creme donut, for me. (I filled the prescription. Twice.)

Here's to Shannon, I think she's a PA. She's wearing scrubs and a smile and her pony tail swings as she walks down the hall.

God bless the hospital chaplain, who pops her head in, now and again. My old man was not the praying type, but I might.

God bless the charge nurse, who wordlessly brought in coffee and a tray of cookies, set them by the window, and waved his way out.

Here's to Dr. Jen, who showed me my old man's CT scan and then said, "Cute jacket! Where'd you get it?"

Here's to the family visiting the man in the next room. They look like 'Sons of Anarchy,' but their talk is funny, kind, and tender.

I have no words — only tears — for the hospice worker who helped my family — and my father, have a good death, surrounded by compassion.

RIP to my father. He led a hair-raising life, but was granted a very gentle death. Bless the army of caregivers at Mercy in Buffalo, N.Y.
